peace of Europe and the world," says the appeal. Part of the text of the call is as follows:
"Under such conditions your chief pastors can be no longer silent, nor can they meet their duty by a perfunctory exhortation to formal prayers for divine interposition. Not until we realize that, beneath all that appears, this war with its awful carnage, is but a struggle for commercial supremacy, can we underits awful carnage, is but a struggle for commercial supremacy, can we understand how alien to hereditary dynasties is the thought of the universal brother-hood of man. Every tradition and every instinct of imperialism is in constant frection with the rule of Christ. The jealousies and hatreds of kings and peoples are not born in heaven. Let victory rest where it may, after millions of brave hearts have ceased to beat, the vassalage of human souls to material wealth, wealth and power will remain the sure harbinger of other wars, of increasing deadliness, as suborned science adds to the machinery of destruction, unless God shall mightly intervene by unseen forces, whose strategies we may not discern, but whose existence and efficiency we dare not doubt."
